Personnel from the Office of Disability Services will also gather information from instructors and course directors about the academic requirements for the student's classes and what types of reasonable academic adjustments might assist the student in meeting the academic requirements of the courses, including practicum experiences. The students also will be asked to participate proactively in understanding the academic requirements and providing insights into the reasonable academic adjustments that would allow the student to fulfill the academic requirements. The Office of Disability Services will consider any recommended reasonable modification or adjustment that would enable the student to have an equal opportunity to benefit from the academic program, and will take into

GUIDELINES FOR DOCUMENTATION OF SPECIFIC LEARNING DISABILITIES

Under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990, as amended as amended by the

Americans with Disabilities Act Amendment Act (ADAAA), and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation

Act of 1973, individuals with learning disabilities are guaranteed certain protections and rights to reasonable academic adjustments based upon documentation. The documentation must indicate the disability substantially limits some major life activity including learning. The following guidelines were developed by the Association on Higher Education and Disability (AHEAD) and are provided

*Woodcock Johnson Psychoeducational Battery-Revised: Test of Cognitive Ability

*Standard-Binet Intelligence Scale: Fourth Edition

Note: The Slosson Intelligence Test-Revised and the Kaufman Adult Intelligence Test do not constitute adequate intelligence test measures.
